|        | Recovery is often seen as monolithic. Sexual, cultural, and racial identities are often glossed over or not considered during inpatient treatment. Research has established that identities such as sexual, racial, and cultural are determinates of health. The experience of identity development in opposition to dominate society can lead to the development of health disparities (e.g. SUDS, obesity, diabetes). According to Gershon Kaufman who wrote On Shame, Identity and the Dynamics of Change, internalized shame leads to a shame identity. Dealing with shame as an identity is different than shame-based behavior. This workshop highlights the difference between the two and participants will discover ways to move toward an emotional sobriety which can have a lasting effect, promote long-term sobriety and increase positive self-regard. Attendees will be able to:
  - Describe a shame-based identity
  - Discuss how shame is often avoided in session due to the practitioner’s own shame
  - Discuss how shame-based identity comes about
  - Explore an approach that is beneficial and not iatrogenic to the patient
  - Employ cultural, racial, and other identity evidence-based interventions |

PrEP and PEP – What You Need to Know
Andy Ansell, PrEP Program Manager, Desert AIDS Project

This presentation will provide information about pre-exposure prophylaxis (PrEP) and post-exposure prophylaxis (PEP). Presenter will review treatment issues, side-effects and costs.

Attendees will be able to:
- Explain the difference between PrEP and PEP and how they work
- Explore the myths about PrEP
- Identify the known side-effects of each
- Discuss costs of treatment and how to access care, even if you think you cannot afford it

Trans Care
Anthony Velasco, MS, APRN, AGPCNP-BC, CNS, PHN, CMSRN, ACRN, AAHIVS, Co-Chair, Transgender Health Program, Desert AIDS Project & University of California Los Angeles

This presentation will focus on transgender health. A wide range of specific needs concerning the trans community will be discussed, from hormone therapy to coping with discrimination within the community.

Attendees will be able to:
- Identify health issues are specific to the trans community
- Examine available resources and potential roadblocks are ahead – health and legislative
- Explore what is on the horizon for trans health and what to expect

This workshop examines pathways toward a productive and healthy life in recovery. Far from being an end in and of itself, recovery is simply the beginning of a journey which most of us never anticipated and for which we were often ill-prepared. This presentation is a skills-based, interactive workshop which first addresses how we can rewrite our life story by moving beyond limiting beliefs to expand awareness of our own potential. This may require difficult, yet productive therapeutic work and diligence as we begin to uncover and accept the particular constellation of talents and individual gifts. Although most people consider resilience a character trait, it is actually a set of skills that can be taught and perfected. Various components of resilience will be discussed, including mindfulness practices, living with intention, gratitude, giving service, and a sense of purpose. Each of these will be examined with examples from the presenter’s life while eliciting interaction with participants about their own experiences.

Attendees will be able to:

- Identify techniques to overcome and rewrite limiting beliefs that constrict potential in recovery
- Discuss worthiness and other concerns that impact their ability to acknowledge their own strengths, gifts and talents
- Examine the central role of connection in recovery and its special role in the LGBTQ+ community
- Explore various skills inherent in creating resilient life in recovery, including the challenges and rewards of that process

| 10:00 am – 11:30 am | Grand Ballroom II    | Sharing the Road – Many Paths
LGBTQi+ Long-Term Recovery Options
Panel Discussion facilitated by Renee Sievert, RN, LMFT, San Diego, CA
Davina Kotulski, PhD, Author, Life Coach, Spiritual Counselor
Susan Lake, Ordained Minister, Spiritual Counselor
Rev. Mark Accomando, Ordained Senior Minister, Centers for Spiritual Living
TJ Woodward, Author, Ordained Agape Minister, Conscious Recovery
This panel is inspired by the origin and history of the recovery movement that includes conscious contact with a higher power, prayer, and meditation. During this workshop, presenters will discuss practices from mindfulness and consciousness practices to the 12 steps of AA and nature-based approaches. Panelists will discuss several evidence-based practices that they teach and use with their clients. Attendees will be able to:
• Explore spiritual modalities on the road to recovery
• Examine the contribution of spirituality, nature, and mindfulness-based practices and other forms of spiritual healing that aid in the recovery process
• Discuss emerging approaches to recovery
| 11:30 am – 12:30 pm | Grand Ballroom II    | Keynote: The Intersection of Mom and Clinician: Raising a Non-Binary Child
Krista Gilbert, PhD, CEO, Constellation Behavioral Health
Utilizing a case study from the presenter’s personal experience, as well as current research and data regarding nonbinary/transgender adolescents, the key clinical pitfalls and best practices will be presented from the perspective of both the family member and the treatment provider. Attendees will be able to:
• Explore the personal narrative of the speaker’s experience of being the parent of a non-binary/transgender youth as a case study and as a clinical expert in working with the LGBTQ population to learn about the shortcomings, challenges, and pressures in the current treatment offerings.
• Identify areas of personal bias related to working with nonbinary and transgender adolescents
• Discuss the specific family dynamics around nonbinary and transgender adolescents
• Examine key clinical considerations/treatment planning in providing treatment to nonbinary and transgender adolescents and their families
| 12:00 pm -1:45 pm  | Grand Ballroom III   | Lunch on Patio                                                                    |

| Mini Workshop Repeating in Grand Ballroom III | Narcan: What, When, and How to Administer It
Amenda Cowan, Outreach Director, Clare | Matrix, Santa Monica, CA
Presenter will review current trends of opioid use, review how opioids are absorbed and metabolized in the body. Participants will learn how to identify and respond to an opioid overdose, including how to administer Narcan (naloxone), an opioid antidote.
Attendees will be able to:
- Identify an opioid overdose and safely administer Narcan
- Explore California laws on naloxone tracking, distribution, and administration
- Review common misconceptions about naloxone
- Leverage conversations around harm reduction and overdose prevention |

| A-1: Fragile Power: Why we need to expand cultural competency to include people who live in identities of power
Paul Hokemeyer, PhD, Drayson Mews, Kensington, London, UK
Historically, psychotherapeutic formulations that address minority populations do so through a lens of the diminished power these human beings possess. These include the constructs of minority stress as it relates to the LGBTI population and feminist psychology. But there is another side of the power bell curve that exists and has not been openly explored in the realm of theoretical constructs and clinical formulations. Power, and it’s expression exists in the intrapersonal, interpersonal and sociocultural realms of everyone’s life. In the psychotherapeutic experience it must be addressed through a lens of cultural competency and clinical excellence. In his book, Fragile Power: Why Having Everything Is Never Enough (Hazelden, 2019) Dr. Paul Hokemeyer, explores the phenomenon of power and develops a clinical formulation to effectively address it. He will discuss his findings in this dynamic presentation.
Attendees will be able to:
- Identify three cultural markers of people who live in identities of power
- Discuss the transference and countertransference that arises between therapist and client around differentials in power identities
- Explore how power is worshipped and disdained in our modern zeitgeist
- Identify a new clinical formulation to address patients who live in the world in elevated power |
| A-2: The importance of attachment healing for LGBTQ+ persons in substance use disorder treatment
Rigo Brueck, PhD, LP, LMFT, Hazelden Betty Ford, Rancho Mirage, CA
Many LGBTQ+ individuals experience intense rejection, betrayal, bullying, and abandonment. The use of alcohol and other drugs as attempts to self-medicate or self-soothe leads to additional experiences of pain and suffering. When providing treatment and therapy for LGBTQ+ persons, a sole focus on the substance use | disorder (SUD) is in most cases not enough. Healing the ability for attachment and connection is an important part of restoring the person to wholeness.

Attendees will be able to:
- Examine state of the science of substance use disorder (SUD)
- Review of proven therapy approaches for SUD
- Explore tools and techniques for healing attachment and connection

The session will highlight recent trends and demographics of the LGBTQ+ population seeking treatment with an additional focus and training on the LGBTQ-Affirming Comprehensive Psychiatric Evaluation (LACPE), a sexual orientation, gender development-specific, development, and culture informed psychiatric assessment.

Attendees will be able to:
- Identify key components of the LGBTQ-Affirming Comprehensive Psychiatric Evaluation (LACPE)
- Examine current trends and demographics of LGBTQ+ individuals seeking treatment for co-occurring disorders
- Discuss the intersections of gender identity, sexual orientation, and other minority status and the impact of these on LGBTQ individuals
- Examine and share the results from the Pride Institute study on gender minority clients in residential treatment

Are we being heard? Everyone wants their seats at the table. When we do not feel heard, it can be interpreted as a microaggression. This is a common problem in the dominant culture and within our LGBTQI+ communities. There are external stressors in our current political, socio-economic, and social justice realm. Hard fought rights are being threatened to cause increased stress, anxiety, and depression – common undercurrents of addiction and mental health disorders. During our conversation, we will look at the difficult questions that need to be asked such as: How do we protect ourselves? How do we support our differences? And how do we as a community build greater resilience and what are our role responsibilities?

Attendees will be able to:
- Raise awareness and understanding about the effects of the LGBTQI+ community, during times of backlash
- Examine how internal and external stress affect the acuity of mental health and addiction disorders
- Create effective tools for integration into treatment plans
- Explore our role and responsibilities as clinicians, leaders and members of the communities

B-2: Sexually Informed Addiction Recovery
Joe Kort, MSW, PhD, Center for Relationship and Sexual Health, Royal Oak, MI

In the beginning of recovery, some men struggle to understand their true sexual identity and orientation. Sexual fluidity is often ignored or misunderstood. Erotic identity is different than sexual identity. Together we will explore the many ways sexual expression manifests and how to help clients assess themselves as LGBTQ or straight.

Attendees will be able to:
- Understand the difference between sexual identity and erotic identity
- Explore various sexual identities that exist for males
- Differentiate between straight, gay and bisexual and go beyond the binary
- List at least three ways men express their sexuality from a strength-based perspective
- Identify four ways to guide men how to self-identity their sexual orientation

B-3 Beyond the ABC’s: Full Spectrum Clinical Awareness with LGBTQ Clients
John Sovec, MA, LMFT, Clinical Consultant, The Life Group, Pasadena, CA

Everyday, LGBTQ clients walk through the door of treatment centers wondering if their identity will be affirmed and recognized as they work through the myriad challenges of substance use. As a professional working with the LGBTQ community, even the most well-meaning clinicians can find themselves making mistakes in communication, treatment planning, and community involvement that make it challenging for an LGBTQ client to feel safe and understood.

It is vital for clinicians to cultivate an awareness of how biases and agendas develop and how the pervasiveness of these constructs can influence the therapeutic alliance. This workshop will explore a model of care that addresses the impact of sexual minority status on mental health, physical health, and recovery. Participants will explore the alienation of LGBTQ clients from their family of origin, understand coping mechanisms that influence LGBTQ identity development and how, by creating an affirming and supportive environment, clients can regain and expand their sense of LGBTQ identity as they move toward recovery.

Attendees will be able to:
- Explore a model of care addressing the impact of sexual minority status on mental health, physical health, and recovery
- Examine the impact of alienation of LGBTQ clients from their family of origin
- Identify coping mechanisms that influence LGBTQ identity development
Discover how through creating an affirming and supportive environment, clients can regain and expand their sense of LGBTQ identity as they move toward recovery.

C-1 Continuum of Care: Developing a Community Culture of Long-Term Recovery Support

Cheryl Houk, Executive Director, Chris Mueller, LCSW, Program Manager, Pam Highfill, LMFT, Director of Outpatient Services, Damon Robinson, Case Manager, Stepping Stone, San Diego

Addiction is cunning, baffling, and powerful. Stepping Stone of San Diego (SSSD) has developed a continuum of care model for supporting clients for up to the first two years of their recovery. This continuum of care is successful because it is designed to keep the client involved with and connected to the sober community and support services for as long as possible. This gives clients a better chance to build a stronger foundation of recovery before moving on to independent living.

Attendees will be able to:

- Identify innovative ways to involve the client in the continuum of care
- Examine ways to build a continuum of care and how to fund it
- Discuss the importance of creating a sense of community for clients

C-2 An Overview of Ethics and Dual Relationships in the LGBTQ+ Recovery Community

Mark McMillan, LMSW, CAADC, The Center for Relationship and Sexual Health, Royal Oak, MI

Most Social Workers and other addiction professionals are aware of the challenges faced when navigating dual relationships with their clients. This workshop will explore the unique and more uncommon challenges that LGBTQ+ addiction therapists struggle with in their local recovery community.

Similar to dual relationships in rural areas, most local LGBTQ+ recovery communities are close-knit and well connected. From the perspective of the professional as a member of the recovery community, the presenter will review different aspects of possible dual relationships, including clients taking service positions in the therapists 12-Step home group, clients becoming friends with the therapist’s 12-Step fellowship members, and other overlooked situations unique to the LGBTQ+ recovery community.

Participants will gain more awareness of conflicts of interest that exist for the LGBTQ+ addiction therapist, the difference of inappropriate behavior and violating behavior in an ethical dilemma, and gain more awareness of maintaining a therapeutic relationship that honors the LGBTQ+ client while ensuring the privacy of the addiction therapist. This workshop will offer short case studies and personal experiences for group discussion.
Attendees will be able to:

- Examine an appropriate ethical foundation of substance abuse treatment for LGBTQ+ clients
- Identify three key differences between inappropriate behavior and ethics violation
- Discuss how an addiction therapist can appropriately protect and maintain their own recovery program while navigating dual relationships with clients
- Explore two case studies that illustrate more overlooked dual relationships unique to the LGBTQ+ therapist in their local recovery community

C-3 Countering Toxic Male Spirituality: Reclaiming The Male Spiritual Journey
Steve Kelly, LPC, CSAT, Quest Counseling Center, Plano, TX

Evidenced-based research is clear: Healthy spirituality improves the quality of recovery and increases long-term success in maintaining sobriety. And yet, what passes as spirituality is often shaming, dualistic, abusive, violent, and performance driven. This toxic spirituality dominates what passes for male spirituality in our present culture.

This dominance in present-day culture complicates and impedes many in the LGBTQ community as they seek to discover what healthy spirituality looks like. This presentation will examine the latest evidenced-based research relating to recovery, spirituality, and the LGBTQ community; explore healthy spirituality as connection; present a healthy paradigm of the male spiritual journey and its implications for ongoing recovery; provide resources for its implementation.

Attendees will be able to:

- Examine current data regarding the importance of healthy spirituality and meaningful recovery.
- Explore healthy spirituality as connection (self, others, and the world).
- Define key elements of toxic male spirituality.
- Present a healthy paradigm for male spirituality (initiation, heroic descent, self-identity, etc.).
- Discuss implications for the LGBTQ community and tools to implement.
